

Henderson Library Information Resources Shortcuts

Subject Specialist Librarians: Our team of librarians is eager to assist you with customizing research services and workshops for you and your classes, help you take full advantage of our collections and services, and provide answers to your library and research questions. Find your own dedicated librarian here. The Information Services Department has also compiled lists of important resources for your discipline to save time for you and your students. Check these out at EagleSource. Also see our virtual reference shelf, our virtual classroom (for additional information resources and online tutorials), and our series of classroom workshops.

Breaking News: Keep track of library resources, construction, and more breaking news from Henderson Library at Zach's News.

Electronic Journals: We have access to 26,460 journals electronically. You can search for specific titles by going to our Electronic Journals A-Z list, or you can browse the list as sorted by subject category.

Research Databases: GALILEO (Georgia Library Learning Online) and Henderson Library offer 359 research databases, many with links to the full-text or full-image articles. From the Library's home page, click on the GALILEO icon. Search for specific titles by choosing the yellow Databases A-Z tab on the GALILEO home page, or see databases listed by discipline under the Browse by Subject tab. After choosing your subject area, go to the Articles & Databases tab to see a complete database list for that subject.

Print Subscriptions: We also subscribe to about 1300 journals in traditional print format. You can search here for specific titles alphabetically or by Library of Congress call number, the latter providing a subject-based sort. Click on a journal title to see the issues Henderson Library owns.

New Book Purchases: In addition to searching our online catalog using author, title, keyword, and subject options (as well as others), you may also limit your search to titles added recently. Look for the link "New Titles List" on the bottom left-hand side of the search screen.

New Scholarly Publication Alerts: In the past, some patrons received table of contents and/or subject Alerts from the Library's gateway to ingenta. Due to budget constraints, this is one of the services that the Library is no longer able to fund. But we continue to provide access to alerting services through many of our databases, which provide e-mail and RSS options. This way you can receive free alerts (with direct links) through your e-mail or blog reader, for new articles which fit your own customized searches, or new tables of content from your favorite journals. We can still use the free component of ingenta without Alerts, which is not linked to our library holdings.

Top Alternative: EBSCOHost (instructions here)

Please contact the reference desk at 478-5645, or your Subject Specialist Librarian, for more information about alerting services.

Sources to Supplement Henderson Library Holdings: Search all University System of Georgia Libraries holdings simultaneously by clicking on the "GIL Universal Catalog" link at the top of the Keyword Search or Exact Search screens in our online catalog. If you need a book from another USG library that is not owned by Henderson, click on "GIL Express Request" at the top of the book's catalog record screen. You may order the book to be delivered to Henderson (or another USG library if that is more convenient for you) via an expedited shipment. GIL Express is for books only, but you may place interlibrary loan orders online for journal articles not owned by Henderson Library and for books not available from Henderson or through GIL Express. More information about using GIL Express and ILL (interlibrary loan) is here.

Government Information: As a selective federal and state government depository library, we provide considerable electronic and print resources, and a dedicated librarian eager to provide assistance. Details are here.

Research Data Sets: The Library holds a membership in the Inter-university Consortium of Political and Social Research (ICPSR). ICPSR maintains and provides access to a vast archive of social science data for research and instruction. Georgia Southern students and faculty may download the data sets directly.
