

How to Prepare Bibliographic Citations: Turabian

Source:

Turabian, Kate L. A Manual for Writers of Term Papers, Theses, and Dissertations. 6th ed., rev. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1996.

I. PREPARING THE LIST OF “WORKS CITED”

The list of “Works Cited” is your bibliography or reference list of sources used in writing your research paper. It appears at the end of the paper and is arranged alphabetically by author’s family name. The first line of each entry is flush with the left margin. All subsequent lines are indented 5 spaces. The bibliography is single-spaced within each source and double-spaced between sources. Sources without authors are arranged alphabetically within the same list by title.

II. DOCUMENTING YOUR SOURCES USING FOOTNOTES OR ENDNOTES

Cite the authority for statements within the text of the research paper by documenting the sources. Use footnotes that appear at the bottom of the page or endnotes that appear in a numerical list at the end of the research paper. Footnotes/Endnotes are single-spaced within notes, but double-spaced between notes, and indented 6 spaces.

ARTICLE IN AN ENCYCLOPEDIA

NOTE

1. Columbia Encyclopedia, 3rd ed., s.v. "russian revolution."

NOTE

1. E. W. Anderson, "Navigation," in Encyclopedia Britannica, 15th ed.

Since encyclopedia articles are arranged alphabetically, s.v. (sub verbo - "under the word") is placed before the title. Well-known reference books are generally not listed in bibliographies. Volume and page numbers are omitted. When cited in notes, the edition, if not the first must be specified. However, no edition may be mentioned for encyclopedias that are under continuous revision but the copyright date.
